Forgotten Books, United States, 2015. Paperback. Book Condition: New. 229 x 152 mm. Language: English Brand New Book  Print on Demand .Excerpt from The Lion and the Fox Out of the shadowy depths of Coill Ultaigh, leaving its gloomy interior ways, roofed by the foliage of beech and oak, and passing through its sparse fringes of dancing birch, four young men came riding on to the plains of Leinster. Here the sun shone brightly upon a wild, bleak land: a waste of heather and bracken, with here and there a clump of stunted trees, the outposts, as it were, of the forest. Some miles away to the east was a reedy lake, and the intervening ground was boggy and covered with rushes and wild cotton. Save for the occasional whistling swoop of a snipe, the plaintive cry of a plover, or the scurry of a rabbit, the whole plain seemed empty of life. The voices of three of the riders rang out cheerfully in this lonely waste. The fourth, a man of slight build and stature, with somewhat sharp features, a pale complexion, hair of indeterminate colour, and hard grey eyes, wearing a doublet and cloak of sober hue and simple cut, rode a short distance ahead of the others. He was older than they - well advanced in the thirties - and had matters, perhaps, to think upon which did not well consort with their gay and careless chatter. Some hundreds of yards from the forest, however, he reined in his horse - as unobtrusive an animal as its master - and waited for them to approach. These three rode abreast.
