Esdras, 9, 40. THE apocryphal books of the Bible occupy a peculiar position. By mediaeval Christians they were accepted in much the same way as the other books. Now, however, a sharp distinction is drawn against them by most Churches. We have no original Hebrew text of them. In most cases, there is no evidence that any such text ever existed. Hence their authenticity, or at least their Divine Inspiration, is open to question, though the religious value of most is not denied. The usual modern attitude toward...
